In November we Remember

Remembering our Dead

Each November, as the leaves fall and nature calls our busy world to a little silence and a gentle peace, we remember those who shared our human journey and for whom we ask the peace of God's presence and the joy of his mercy.

When I worked as a priest in Paris, one of the requests I used to receive from different people back home in Ireland was to find the graves of their family members who had died and were buried in France. It was an extraordinary privilege. I was often amazed at how faithful people at home were to try to remember those who belonged to them but who had died far away and whose earthly remains rested in the quiet of a foreign land. Some were religious sisters, some were students, some were soldiers, some were writers and artists, some just happened to be caught by the winds of time in a strange place - each had a story, a dream and, maybe most importantly, a name.

That sense of the importance of remembering them by name struck me often, but particularly when I found a grave and went to visit it, either on behalf of, or sometimes with, the family members who had made the journey to remember their loved one. In the midst of all the French names, we would find a stone with a name like Boyle, or Sheehy, or Byrne or Murphy. It seemed so incongruous, and even lonely, but then it also seemed so beautiful to be able to come and stand to honour the memory of "someone from home." Remembering people by name like that is a beautiful privilege. These November days you are invited to walk the path of memory for a moment, to delve into the wellspring of hope deep in your heart as you honour those who have died and whom we commend to the hope of the Resurrection.

A Coronavirus Prayer

Almighty and eternal God, our refuge in every danger, to whom we turn in our distress, in faith we pray: look with compassion on the afflicted, grant eternal rest to the dead, comfort to mourners, healing to the sick, peace to the dying, strength to healthcare workers, wisdom to our leaders and the courage to reach out to all in love, so that together we may give glory to your holy name. Amen.
